INTRODUCTION

Femicide/femicide is “the violent death of women based on gender, whether it occurs within the family, a domestic partnership, or any other interpersonal relationship; in the community, by any person, or when it is perpetrated or tolerated by the state or its agents, by act or omission” (MESECVI, 2008). It is the most extreme form of violence against women. It is not a matter of “...isolated incidents that arise suddenly and unexpectedly, but rather the ultimate act of violence which is experienced in a continuum of violence” (1) against women. To fight against it, more than a dozen Latin American countries have adopted laws that specifically penalize femicide or femicide. European countries also rely on increasingly specific legal instruments to combat violence against women. Twenty years of the Belém do Pará Convention (2) in Latin America and the entry into force of the Istanbul Convention (3) Europe demonstrate an increasingly stronger international commitment against this kind of violence, a commitment which has also been recently expressed in the establishment of EU-CELAC's Bi-Regional Dialogue on Gender Issues. However, legal norms, agreements, and international dialogues alone are not sufficient for the eradication of violence against women, nor its most extreme manifestation, femicide/ femicide. It is necessary that the whole of the state structure commit itself to act with due diligence to prevent, investigate, sanction all acts of violence against women, as indicated in Belém do Pará and Istanbul, as well as to compensate the victims. The protection of the life of women is fundamental when evaluating the diligence of States before acts of violence (4). Femicide/femicide is often a consequence of lack of due diligence in the actions taken by States; such is the case when, for example, public policy, carried out by bodies charged with the implementation of the law, such as the police force or the judicial system, are ineffective or passive in cases of violence against women. The VIII Conference on Femicide will examine some aspects related to the duty of due diligence in the actions of States in the face of violence against women and feminicides/femicides. Due diligence will be addressed from an international perspective, including strategies, initiatives, and tools that are being developed in the European and Latin American spheres, as well as, bi-regionally, to contribute to the eradication of the violence against women and feminicide/femicide: In what way do the regional conventions (Belém do Pará and Istanbul) help States act with due diligence in the face of violence against women? As the end of the EU-CELAC 2013-2015 Action Plan term approaches, how has the Bi-Regional Dialogue on Gender Issues contributed to the eradication of feminicide/femicide? The conference will also include a national perspective on due diligence, and in this sense, it will center on means of protection, attention to health, social services, and preventive campaigns, problems related to investigations and judicial processes as well as sanctions in the face of violence against women and, in particular, feminicide/femicide .
